

I am writing to protest the possible weakening of the Indiana no-call list by allowing banks, credit card companies and other financial organizations to once again harass their customers with offers. Spam email is bad enough but over-zealous marketing phone calls are truly an intrusion. The rights of individuals desiring a peaceful evening in their own home should take priority over the greed of yet another powerful corporate lobbying group.